

The 2017 GP Dashboard

- our annual survey of some of the most prominent fund managers around the world - revealed some interesting things

We posed a new question in our survey this year related to succession planning and you may be surprised by the response

Out of the

93 GPs

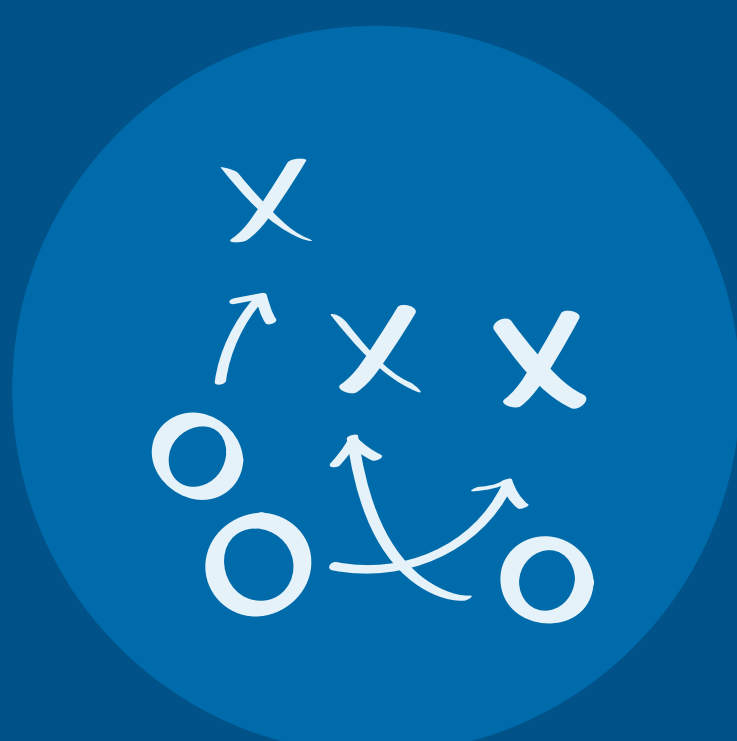

we polled this year

said they put a formal succession plan in place

We've often said that the private markets as an asset class is still relatively young, thus many pioneer firms are still being run by their founders.

Already, a number of leaders in our industry announced their formal plans of succession. We'll anticipate this trend to continue and, ultimately, we perceive this as a positive development and reflection of the long-term nature of this asset class.

What else was covered in this year's GP Dashboard?

- CEO concerns
- Exit activity
- The year ahead
