Monthly Commentary

The Hamilton Lane Global Private Assets Fund I-USD share class at the Master Fund returned 0.75% for the month of December, bringing annualized since-inception returns to 12.57%. The I-USD and D-USD share classes at the Singapore Feeder returned 0.80% and 0.74%, respectively. The public markets were up in December, with the MSCI World Index returning 0.81% in USD terms.

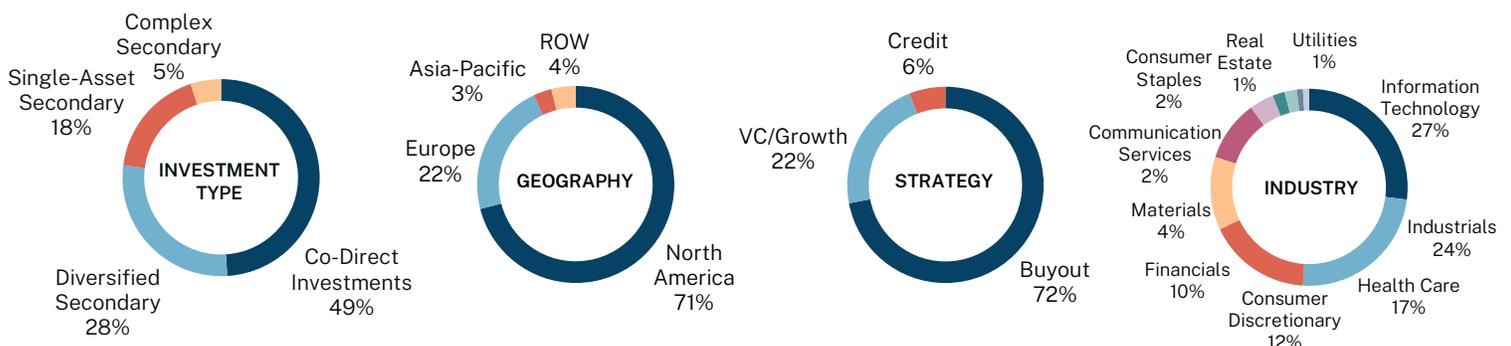

Performance across the GPA portfolio was positive in December, with gains across both secondaries and co-investments with co-investments serving as the primary driver of returns. December’s results capped a strong year, bringing full-year 2025 portfolio performance to 11.23%.

One of the top contributors during the month was TradingView, a global charting and analytics platform with a large and highly engaged user base that enables both retail and professional investors to analyze markets and identify trading opportunities across asset classes. Hamilton Lane invested in TradingView in April 2024 alongside Smash Capital. The uplift in valuation in December reflects recent funding rounds, including the acquisition of a meaningful stake by a large growth investor at an $8 billion equity valuation, following two prior secondary transactions in Q3 and early Q4 2025 at $7 billion. TradingView has continued to deliver strong financial performance and benefit from favorable macro tailwinds, underscoring the Fund’s exposure to high-quality assets.

Deployment remained steady through year-end, with one new investment closed in December. Project Activate is a GP-led secondary transaction with A.Capital that provides liquidity on a select number of A Capital Partners II, L.P. investments, while allowing the GP and new investors to remain positioned for continued value creation. This late-stage venture investment includes four core positions that account for a majority of NAV: Notion, Hugging Face, Databricks, and Replit. Hamilton Lane had an advantage in this competitive transaction due to familiarity with the assets and a strong relationship with the GP. The transaction provides access to a portfolio of market-leading companies across the disruptive tech and SaaS sectors with compelling future growth potential.

GPA’s cash balance stood at approximately 6% as of the end of December. This capital is earmarked for transactions expected to close over the next three months across a range of compelling direct co-investment and secondary opportunities.

Certain of the performance results included herein do not reflect the deduction of any applicable advisory or management fees, since it is not possible to allocate such fees accurately in a vintage year presentation or in a composite measured at different points in time. A client's rate of return will be reduced by any applicable advisory or management fees, carried interest and any expenses incurred. Hamilton Lane's fees are described in Part 2 of our Form ADV, a copy of which is available upon request.

The following hypothetical example illustrates the effect of fees on earned returns for both separate accounts and fund-of-funds investment vehicles. The example is solely for illustration purposes and is not intended as a guarantee or prediction of the actual returns that would be earned by similar investment vehicles having comparable features. The example is as follows: The hypothetical separate account or fund-of-funds consisted of $100 million in commitments with a fee structure of 1.0% on committed capital during the first four years of the term of the investment and then declining by 10% per year thereafter for the 12-year life of the account. The commitments were made during the first three years in relatively equal increments and the assumption of returns was based on cash flow assumptions derived from a historical database of actual private equity cash flows. Hamilton Lane modeled the impact of fees on four different return streams over a 12-year time period. In these examples, the effect of the fees reduced returns by approximately 2%. This does not include performance fees, since the performance of the account would determine the effect such fees would have on returns. Expenses also vary based on the particular investment vehicle and, therefore, were not included in this hypothetical example. Both performance fees and expenses would further decrease the return.
